

Corps of Engineers host public workshops.

Residents of cities and communities around Old Hickory Lake are encouraged to attend upcoming public workshops scheduled for 6:00 p.m., March 18th at the Old Hickory Community Center, and 6:00 p.m. March 20th at Hendersonville City Hall.

The meetings are hosted annually by the staff of Old Hickory Lake Resource Management Office, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, to provide an opportunity for the public to ask questions about and provide input for the various resource management programs including shoreline management, recreation, environmental issues and other Corps programs. Some free trees and shrubs will be available for adjacent property owners to plant on public property, while they last.

For information or directions to the meeting sites, call the Resource Manager's Office at (615) 822-4846 or (615) 847-2395.
